Greatly interested in his vivid stories. He said he had a leave of absence and had been sent here by some German commercial interests to huy various materials. He did not suggest in any way that he was connected with the German government or that he was a spiv or secret service man, or that he was intending to blow up or destroy boats or munitions plants.

The following Saturday Breitung said he and Dr. Kienzle met Fay by invitation and went out with him in his motor boat. He denied it was true the boat ride was anything more than an ordinary Saturday afternoon pleasure trip. This denial was in reference to reports that Fay had used the boat in his supposed scheme to attach bombs to munitions ships.

Fay asked him to act as an agent in the purchase of chlorate of potassium. He said he turned the order over to Siebs, because he knew the latter would get a commission in the transaction. But before he would consent to advance the money, Breitung said, he advance the money, Breitung said, he called up Kienzle and questioned him When the charges of conspiracy against Dr. Herbert Kienzle and day kernel and questioned of streaming are taken into court their layers will try to prove them victims of the machinations of "stool pigeon" and plotters in pro-Ally employ.

They will seek to prove that Paul sebs, who figured largely in the events leading up to the homb plot indictments, but was not named in them, was recreatly in the employ of the French and British interests; and that these interests had combined to set afoot an anti-German agitation in the United States by "framing" what would appear a feering to sibes as "government to be in possession of evidence that Lieu.
